

Aaaah, today has been a busy day.

Started out on a trip to Lawrence to PetWorld for their semi annual sale. I was second in line at 9:30; the store opens at 10:00. I tried bribing the two kid brothers that were in front of me, for a dollar, to let me cut in front of them. They said "no way!". Nice to see that kind of enthusiasm in the youth. Of course once the doors opened, they were aghast at the cookies on the table by the entrance...so I strode right past them to the fish area.

Saw a lot of great deals and passed some by. I'm kicking myself for not getting the congo tetras, zebra danios, and white clouds...but oh well. Ended up with four Bolivian rams, ten Black Phantom Tetras, four Metae corydoras, and six Skunk corydoras. Didn't buy any plants or hard goods, but there were decent deals. Thanks PetWorld for the great time.

Ended the day with the HAAS Christmas party. It was nice to see alot of the regular folks and a few newer faces. It's difficult times both economically and just planning things around in general; smaller crowd but it was fun. Randy and Jenny (sorry if I misspelled your name) got a life time achievement award; which I'm sure both of them were excited and deserving of. That was really cool.

The white christmas gift exchange went relatively mildly; not much stealing except for some discus. I scored a L180 pleco. Not sure what the heck it is, but it's alive and in a quarantine tank for now...so we'll see. Thanks for bringing that DaveW and sharing that passion.

Time to go for now.

Thanks for stopping by.
